NATIONAL CITIZENS COMMITTEE TO SAVE EDUCATION AND LIBRARY FUNDS

Formation of a nationwide committee of citizens to Save Education and Library Funds has been announced by Dr. Detlev Bronk, who will chair the committee.

Dr. Bronk, past president, National Academy of Sciences, past chairman of the Board of the National Science Foundation and president emeritus of the Rockefeller University, said that the committee has been formed because of a "deep concern" about the proposed reduction in Federal appropriations for education in the coming fiscal and school year. These proposed reductions are almost one billion dollars below the 4.1 billion actually appropriated for the current fiscal year and $370 million below the original Johnson budget published in January. Nearly 25% of the $370 million cutback for Office of Education activities would come out of the major programs designed to upgrade school, college and public libraries to minimal levels of adequacy.

"We hope it will be noted," said Dr. Bronk, "that the initial letters of the committee's name, which forthrightly expresses its purpose, spell SELF, because in fact every American citizen, whether he knows it or not, has a strong self-interest in maintaining the library development momentum that Federal support has made possible since it was initiated in the Eisenhower Administration.

"Everyone has a stake in this: the businessman, the technician, the college student, the parents of school children; and all responsible citizens concerned for the future quality of American life. If these cuts recommended by the Bureau of the Budget are not overridden by aware and knowledgeable people, education, manpower, economic and scientific development will suffer."

Dr. Bronk noted that only $3.2 billion, or slightly more than one and one-half percent, of the total Federal budget was recommended for programs administered by the Office of Education. "In the face of enormous problems, all of which call for more and better education, rather than less, this attempt to assign low priority to educational programs and learning opportunities seems unbelievable. These propositions are still before the Congress for debate, and we intend to let Congress know why we feel that the funds for education and libraries must be restored.

According to the committee, should the cuts prevail, the amounts available would be unreasonable in terms of the needs. For instance:

A mere $12.5 million would be available for college libraries at a time when more than one hundred new community colleges are being established each year, from scratch, and new knowledge needs to flow faster to a record student body.

Money for public library services would be reduced to $17.5 million, while funds to replace antiquated public library buildings would be entirely eliminated.

This is a time when modern instruction and learning depend more heavily than ever before on books and other school library resources.

The current Administration recommendation proposes the appropriation of only one-third of the money allocated for major library programs in the earlier fiscal 1970 Johnson budget. In other words, only about 11% of the money the Congress had intended libraries to have would be available for them.

The National Citizens Committee to Save Education and Library Funds will aid members of the public to take appropriate action, with suggestions in newspaper ads, leaflets and other publicity.

In a letter, June 13, 1969, to all members of the House-Labor-HEW appropriations sub-committee, Dr. Bronk cautioned that the proposed slash in the Federal education and library budget would imperil the nation's future.

Winthrop College Library

A New Look for a South Carolina Library

The building renaissance in the public library system has spread to the college campuses of South Carolina. New library buildings have been completed recently at many South Carolina colleges. This month's article features the Ida Jane Dacus Library at Winthrop College in Rock Hill.

Begun in the Fall of 1968, the Dacus Library was completed in May and is open for service to students attending summer school.

Built of red brick and white precast concrete panels, the library blends well with the nearby training school building. The modular construction was planned primarily for flexibility, to permit two additions which ultimately will double the present building size. The overhanging upper level is supported by masonry pylons which are actually stairwells and utility shafts.

Winthrop College Library

The Dacus Library is almost totally an open stack facility. The special service sections house government documents, microforms, audio-visual aids and Archives.

Financed by state institutional bonds and a federal grant, the building was constructed at a cost of $1,365,000. Furnishings added $340,000 to the total cost.

The interior conveys a bright modern effect with walnut paneling, painted cement block walls and vinyl wall coverings.

Lyles, Bissett, Carlisle and Wolff, Architects, who have planned many of the new college libraries, designed the contemporary building. Claussen and Webster of Augusta, Georgia were general contractors for the project.

Like many public libraries in South Carolina, the original library at Winthrop was built with Carnegie funds. This new structure, replacing the old Carnegie library, is the fourth new building on the Winthrop campus in the last four years. Others include two high rise residence halls and student center.

NEW SLB STAFF MEMBER

Barrett Wilkins joined the staff of the State Library Board as Research Assistant on June 16.

Mr. Wilkins who holds a B. A. from Emory University and an M. A. in History from Georgia State College attended the University of Wisconsin Library School under the scholar-ship program of the State Library Board after interning at the Florence County Library.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS AT THE LIBRARY DOOR ----

Have you heard about the DOER contest? Is your public library involved?

The DOER contest -- "Developing One's Entire Resources" -- is being coordinated by Clemson University Extension Service and co-sponsored by four South Carolina firms or groups interested in orderly growth and development. Prizes range from $1,000 down to $150.

The contest is aimed at encouraging people in the 46 counties to improve their areas through total development of resources.

Counties may qualify by organizing a committee for total resource development and setting up a program aimed at utilization of human resources, natural resources, and manmade facilities and services. The county committee should list full information on all such resources and then make detailed lists of items needing development under each. They will then make plans for development; conduct projects to this end; show results obtained; and outline plans for continuing the development activities in the future.

The entire program will be carried out in cooperation with the local county extension agent under the sponsorship of the Carolina Power and Light Co., Duke Power Co., S.C. Electric Cooperatives, and S.C. Electric and Gas Company. Three prizes will be offered in each of the three Extension districts plus top awards of $750 and $500 for state winners. Judging will be carried out this fall and awards presented at a luncheon.

Information on whether or not your county is participating or how it can go about participating can be obtained from the county agent or the local power company.

Every library should be included in the county's DOER program. The plans for resource development offer an exceptional opportunity to make library needs known to the public and to insure that library development is a part of community planning.

See your county agent today. Ask that the library be represented on the county committee. Inform the committee of library resources, deficiencies, and goals. Get in on the action - now!

The library is a branch of the York County Library.

In September 1968 a construction contract for $41,752 for the renovation and expansion of the library was awarded to Moore Construction Company. Funds totalling $35,000 were available for the project. The Chapin Foundation pledged $3,000 provided public subscription of $9,000 were collected.

ANNE LIBRARY

Dear Anne:

I'm a librarian and I work hard at being one. I labor early and late to see that my staff follows the procedures for registration and circulation and keeps up with the overdue notices and records of delinquent borrowers. Then I have to supervise the ordering, acquisitioning and processing of the books. At odd moments I check to be sure the reference department is functioning smoothly. I have two new board members and they're after me to join things like the county unit of the S. C. Association of Counties, attend meetings of the Art Commission and participate in all kinds of community activity. In addition they think I should carry on an intensive publicity campaign using all the local news media.

Anne, I run a library, not a publicity agency. How can I do both?

Anti-publicity

Dear Anti:

Did you ever hear of the missing link? I think you're missing one. The librarian is the link between people and the library and its resources. The purpose of library programming is to encourage people to expand their horizons and their minds. You're concentrating on routines and things. Get out of your livery tower, publicize your good work and let your light shine before men.

Anne
